Michał Krzyżanowski is Full Professor and Chair in Media and Communication Studies at Örebro University, Sweden. His research focuses on discourse and communication in the context of political, social and institutional change in contemporary Europe. He has worked widely on the issues of discourse, discrimination and hate speech including from the perspective of new/social and traditional media and European right-wing populism. Michał is Executive Editor of Journal of Language and Politics and co-editor of book series Bloomsbury Advances in Critical Discourse Studies. He also sits on editorial boards of such journals as, inter alia, Critical Discourse Studies and Social Semiotics. He is the author and editor of several major monographs and anthologies in critical discourse research on media, political and organizational communication.

Marloes van Noorloos is assistant professor of criminal law at the Department of Criminal Law of Tilburg Law School. She obtained a Ph.D. degree from Utrecht University in 2011 with her dissertation 'Hate speech revisited. A comparative and historical perspective on hate speech law in the Netherlands and England & Wales' (Intersentia). She has published extensively about 'hate speech' and defamation of religion. In her work she combines the perspectives of comparative criminal law, international human rights law, legal theory and the socio-political context behind the law. She is also active in the field of human rights, e.g. as president of the Dutch section of the International Commission of Jurists (NJCM) and board member of NJCM's Public Interest Litigation Project (strategic litigation for human rights in het Netherlands).
